Department of Public Instruction

Overview of Master's Program

Meredith College offers a Master of Education (M.Ed.) program in five specialty areas: academically and intellectually gifted (AIG), elementary education, English as a second language (ESL), reading, and special education (general curriculum) and the Master of Arts in Teaching in four specialty areas: elementary education, English as a second language, special education (general curriculum), and health and physical education (HPE). The M.Ed. specialty areas of elementary education and reading have been offered at Meredith College since 1983. In supporting areas of high need in North Carolina, the Department of Education began offering a M.Ed. in ESL, AIG, and special education (general curriculum). The M.Ed. program reflects the mission and purpose of the College and the DOE by fostering in students “integrity, independence, scholarship, and personal growth,” and builds upon the strengths of the undergraduate program. The co-educational program is designed for the K-12 teacher who has a baccalaureate degree and has (or is eligible for) an initial teaching license. The program centers on giving teachers the advanced tools to serve the 21st century student in today’s schools. To meet the needs of our graduate students, the DOE structures the program to encourage extensive reading, independent thinking, creativity, application to practice, and appropriate research, which prepares the master teacher to take leadership roles in the school or district. In addition, many courses are offered as blended combining face to face and online learning and a few are completely online. The M.Ed. graduate is knowledgeable about information technology and the empowerment it offers for transforming teaching and learning. And as reflective practitioners, graduates are able to assess their own teaching and their students’ learning, and then both design instruction to support learning and identify their own continuous professional development needs.

In response to North Carolina’s need for teachers, the DOE launched its Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT) program in 2008. The eighth cohort of MAT candidates, which includes elementary, ESL (beginning in 2011), and special education students will intern in fall 2017 in school systems in the Triangle area. The MAT program has been successful in preparing committed adults with no background in education to be professional teachers. The DOE continues to discuss other MAT programs in other areas such as family and consumer sciences, mathematics, and sciences, and began offering courses in fall 2016 for students interested in a MAT program in health and physical education (HPE). The DOE faculty and staff focus on the goals of the program, which include preparing highly qualified beginning teachers who know how to teach all students, have the skills to collaborate with other school personnel and families, know their content area, and who understand their roles in local, national, and global contexts. Four information sessions are held per year, and through solid recruiting efforts by the members of the department, led by the manager of the graduate program, it works to meet expectations in a difficult time. In addition, the graduate program manager brings fresh ideas for recruiting candidates into the program and with continual web presence along with attendance at state and national conferences more interest in the programs has been generated.

Special Features of Master's Program

The faculty in the DOE at Meredith College continues to assess how best to serve current teachers and those who desire to be teachers. Scheduling of courses in the evenings makes the M.Ed. and the MAT program accessible for full time teachers and others, including teachers in year round schools. The M.Ed. program offers courses that are online, hybrid, face-to-face, and a study abroad opportunity in Sansepolcro, Italy. The MAT program offers a full time track, which takes 16 months to complete, and a part-time track, which requires one additional year. Partnership schools work to provide the MAT students quality field experiences, and the DOE has established partnerships with school systems in the Triangle area, i.e., Johnston, Lee, Durham, Chapel Hill-Carrboro, and Orange, not only to offer services to those schools, but also to serve a broader population of graduate students in its programs. MAT students also gain valuable experience tutoring in community afterschool programs. Increased flexibility in the M.Ed. program meets the diverse professional interests and academic needs of the students. M.Ed. students complete a research project and a portfolio that document their growth and integration of course material with practice throughout the program. Beginning in the fall 2017, MAT students will begin an in-house pilot of the nationally normed ETS-PPAT to address the assessment of pedagogy. M.Ed. research projects are presented during the Graduate Education Conference, “Innovative Teaching and Learning,” held on campus each spring. The conference showcases graduate research and academic projects, which gives students an opportunity to present their work to faculty, colleagues, MAT students, and friends. The conference provides the faculty and the student an assessment tool to evaluate progress.

In fall 2016, the DOE began offering a fully online Curriculum Instructional Specialist (CIS) add-on license that enables teachers with masters’ degrees to be in a position to be considered for central office or school leadership positions such as instructional resources teacher, curriculum coordinator, or reading specialist. Also, the MAT is expanded, offering a master’s degree in health and physical education (HPE).
