Guiding Principles

1. Transition to support on-site instruction and nutritious, appealing school meals to all students, while addressing the needs of distance learners and other children in the community who are food-insecure within the human and financial resources available;

2. Support the physical, mental, social and emotional health and well-being of children, staff, families and communities by implementing social distancing and personal hygiene protocols;
3. Operate programs in a manner that promotes overall sustainability and program integrity;

4. Communicate often with stakeholders about the challenges and opportunities associated with providing school meals; and

5. Use our collective voices to transform school meals to reflect new and emerging education and nutrition priorities.
